

National Alliance Labor-Management Partnership

The National Alliance is a partnership agreement between Bechtel Construction Company, the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and individual international unions. It is an approach to labor-management relations in which both parties commit to joint efforts in the marketing, planning, and execution of union construction. Core principles of the Alliance include: increasing teamwork, continuously improving construction processes, lowering workers' compensation costs, achieving zero accidents, and pursuing business development opportunities. Maximum latitude for creating innovation comes from the Alliance working in tandem with traditional labor agreements.
